

Rylstone building update

The redevelopment project at the Rylstone Multipurpose Service (MPS) is now a couple of months into the construction phase, and work is occurring at several areas on-site.

Following the completion of the planning and detailed design development stages in late 2016, the Rylstone MPS project was fast-tracked to move into construction.

The contracted builders, Zauner Construction, commenced the main construction activities on-site in early January 2017. They are also working on the Coolah MPS redevelopment project.

Current work at Rylstone is focusing on the extensions to HealthOne and the additional Residential Aged Care (RAC) rooms, as well as demolition to the existing RAC activities and dining area. You can see this work occurring in the aerial image below.

The project involves extensions and refurbishment to several areas of the MPS, including new RAC rooms and dining area, new staff accommodation, refurbished acute rooms and improvements to HealthOne.

The Rylstone MPS redevelopment project is estimated to be complete in late 2017.

Aerial view of the Rylstone MPS redevelopment project, showing the work occurring on the existing HealthOne and Residential Aged Care areas.

(Image from 26 February 2017)

Rylstone MPS redevelopment project timeline

Stats on the project

(as at March 2017)

- ⇒ The Rylstone project is part of a $300 million NSW-wide program of works to upgrade existing or build new MPS facilities in rural and remote communities.
- ⇒ To date, there have been over 11 full-time trades employed (at both the Rylstone and Coolah redevelopment sites).
- ⇒ Zauner Construction is targeting a percentage of trade work to be apprentices, and also targeting Aboriginal participation in the project.
- ⇒ Construction is estimated to be complete late in 2017.

Footings and bored piers for the HealthOne extension.

Need more information?

To find out more about the Rylstone MPS redevelopment please visit www.mps.health.nsw.gov.au or contact the Rylstone MPS Health Service Manager on 6357 8111.